Brussels 2030
Summer Assembly
28 June - 2 July 2023
A more inclusive, democratic, green and caring Brussels. With culture at its heart. Yes, before us lies the decade of all challenges. How can we shape new forms of social cohesion? How can we cope with climate change? How do the artistic and cultural sector relate to these changes? How can we reimagine the major projects of the region and the city in terms of super-diversity, equality, sustainability, mobility? How can we transform the city for the better? The keywords are change and transition!

With this Summer Assembly, Brussels2030 - led by Jan Goossens and Fatima Zibouh - is inviting civil society, arts, culture, science, and the diversity of actors that make this city to help prepare Brussels to become the European Capital of Culture in 2030. The Summer Assembly will be organized at Les Halles, from Wednesday June 28th till Sunday July 2nd, 2023. It intends to offer a space where diverse urban actors can inspire one another and initiate processes of collaborative city-making.

Do you want to contribute to making a more democratic, green, inclusive and caring Brussels, with culture at its heart? Do you want to coauthor our story? Do you wish to share your experiences and/or aspirations?

Be welcome!

OPENING CEREMONY
27.06.23

The second edition of the Brussels2030 Summer Assembly will be festively opened on Tuesday 27 June, in Maison des Cultures et de la Cohésion Sociale (Molenbeek - 18h). More information on the programme and location of the opening ceremony will follow.

Everyone is welcome to attend.

You can register here: Join the Brussels2030 Summer Assembly 2023.
Cultivating a vibrant and sustainable cultural capital: art, culture, and inclusion in Brussels and Europe.

Join an exciting debate about the role of art and culture in building an inclusive and sustainable urban community in Brussels and Europe. This is all about how we can bring together the city’s civil society, artists, cultural institutions, universities, businesses, and most importantly, its citizens and young people, in a laboratory for the future.

Brussels has set a goal to become the Cultural Capital of Europe in 2030, and we’re only a year and a half away from presenting our bid book. This is a crucial moment to take stock of what we’ve achieved so far, what’s still ahead of us, and how we can use art, culture, civic engagement, and urban development to strengthen each other in the long-term.

During this event, you’ll get to hear from our team who will give you an update on where we stand and where we’re headed. They’ll also share opportunities for everyone to get involved and contribute to this exciting process of co-creation.

So whether you’re an artist, a student, a community organizer, an entrepreneur, or just someone who cares about the future of Brussels, this is your chance to join the conversation and help shape the city’s cultural future.

Fatima Zibouh (Brussels2030) is co-head of mission for Brussels’ bid to become European Capital of Culture. With a doctorate in political science, Fatima Zibouh is a specialist in inclusion and its cultural dimensions.

Jan Goossens (Brussels2030) was appointed co-mission holder of Brussels2030 in 2021. He studied literature and philosophy in Antwerp, Leuven and London. He was artistic director of KVS in Brussels from 2001 to 2016, and general director of the Festival de Marseille from 2016 to 2022. Since 2015, he has also been co-artistic director of the festival Dream City in Tunis, together with Selma and Sofiane Ouissi. Jan Goossens has been working on the intersection of artistic creation and metropolitan coexistence, in Europe and in the ‘Global South’, for more than two decades.

Keywords: Medicinal and edible plants, Co-habitation, Resilience

Hosts: Brussels Health Gardens - Jardins Santé à Bruxelles
What: co-creation lab
Participants: min. 10 – max. 12
When: Wednesday 28.06 – 14h-17h
Language: FR/EN
Where: Maison des Arts – Salon 5

In Learning(with)Plants interactive workshop we will invite local Brussels plants to participate in our space of learning and healing. We will reflect on vegetal intelligence and will question what plants can teach us and how they can participate in our mutual learning to respond to a fast-changing world. We will be sharing stories, memories, experiences, diverse knowledge and we will co-write(with)plants by shapeshifting into a guest plant, exploring phytophagy by creating a short story, poem, prayer, opinion piece or some other artwork.

Co-creating a more sustainable urban future: the case of Brussels’ urban mobility

Co-créer une duurzamere stedelijke toekomst: de stedelijke mobiliteit in Brussel
Co-créer un avenir urbain plus durable : le cas de la mobilité urbaine à Bruxelles

Keywords: Co-creation, inclusivity, sustainable mobility

When: Wednesday 28.06 – 14h-17h
Participants: max. 30
Language: FR/ENG
Where: Maison des Arts – Salon 7

How can everyone find their way towards a more sustainable lifestyle? How can we achieve sustainable urban mobility? A co-creation process can help us gain valuable knowledge and hopefully, find the right answers. Defined as ‘active, creative and social collaboration of different groups of people to develop new solutions’, co-creation is an increasingly popular approach to solving complex problems. However, the extent to which co-creation can benefit society depends on the equity, representativity and inclusivity of the process. During this interactive workshop, you will learn more about co-creation, several methodologies to put this approach into practice, and how to make sure no one is left behind during the process. Focusing on the transportation system of Brussels, we will co-create solutions to facilitate the transition towards sustainable urban mobility. This workshop is open to everyone, and no previous experience or specific knowledge is required.

Come2Art: Art-based citizenship

Come2Art : La citoyenneté par l’art
Come2Art: kunstgedreven burgerschap

Keywords: Creative Placemaking, EU Cultural Policy, Active Citizenship

Hosts: Culture Action Europe
What: co-creation lab
Participants: min. 70 – max. 100
Language: ENG
When: Wednesday 28.06 – 14h-17h
Where: Les Halles – Foyer

Come2Art is a policy roundtable and a co-creation lab about arts-based active citizenship and creative place-making. This international workshop will bring together artists, community members, civil society organisations and policymakers from different European countries to discuss a set of recommendations advocating for stronger political and policy support for artists’ social role in building community resilience through artistic practices at the local, regional, national and European levels. Participants will work together over the course of the workshop to discuss and engage with European-wide policy recommendations to be used as guidance for implementation in cities across Europe.

When: Wednesday 28.06 to Friday 30.06 – 14h-17h
Participants: no registration needed
Language: NL/FR/ENG
Where: outside Les Halles

This co-creation lab aims to stimulate, nurture, and collect young people’s images of the future for culture in Brussels through spontaneous conversations in the immediate surroundings of Les Halles. The lab is focused on the rigorous imagination of young people about culture in Brussels in 2039, 9 years after the city’s potential celebration as European Capital of Culture. During the lab, a continuous screening of a map of Brussels in Les Halles will show the urban choreographies of interviewers and interviewees and accumulate into a complex webbing of images and audio recordings of the futures talks. The lab aims to create a ‘futures palimpsest’ that will trigger individual and collective agency in the present and near future.

Participants: max. 15

Language: NL

Where: BELvue (departure)

Discover the BELvue museum in a different way: through the eyes of Leila! The BELvue is working with FMDO to train several people from immigrant backgrounds to tell their life stories through the museum’s themes. The six student guides have learned Dutch and will each tell their incredible, sometimes extraordinary, sometimes moving story that led them to their arrival in their new country, their second home, Belgium. Leila worked during the Cold War as a radio editor and teacher in Georgia, which was then part of the Soviet Union. She lived there in a Yezidi religious minority group and tells how the end of the communist climate changed her situation. She guides you through the halls of democracy, migration, pluralism and language.

What: field trip, site visit, walk

When: Wednesday 28.06 – 14h-17h

Participants: max. 15

Language: NL/FR/ENG

Where: ISELP (departure)

In the lee is an immersive walk where we will explore how to experience lee in the busy Brussels city center. City residents and visitors are constantly exposed to all kinds of stimuli. In the middle of the noisy traffic, crowds, screens and worries, the need for peace and quiet becomes important. Where can you experience this in the city? And how can the city create more sheltered areas?

When: Wednesday 28.06 – 14h-17h
Participants: max. 20
Language: FR
Where: BELvue (departure)

What if? What if, while walking through the BELvue Museum, we discovered stories, legends or tales about a surreal, funny and absurd country that looks like Belgium. Stories that would answer big questions such as: how do you learn to become a king? What is the origin of poverty? Or how does a Belgian mouse escape from a big cat? And then there will also be a language course in Brussels expressions and other “brols” and “carabistoles”. Michel Verbeek, a professional storyteller with a passion for Belgianness, will take you on a storytelling tour of the museum for young and old. Come and escape through voice, words and gestures.

Participants: min. 7 - max. 14
Language: NL/FR/ENG
Where: Maison des Arts – Salon 6 (departure)

Common Fields involves a field trip and an open collaborative creative workshop. We invite participants to explore park Botanique, a threshold between the natural and the urban, using our mobile phone to take photographs that are then reworked into prints. We generate a collective composition, where individual, subjective and collective perception intersect and where a new landscape emerges. Not only the field trip, but also the final artwork is a place of exchange, exploration, and imagination to rethink the city through commoning and commoning art through the city.

Participants: min. 6 - max. 15 (five-day workshop - register for all five sessions)
Language: FR/ENG
Where: Agora Simone Veil (departure)

In this five-day activity, participants are immersed in the world of Minecraft to dream up and design a new European capital, after a visit of European headquarters the first day. Using the popular video game as a creative tool, participants spend half-days crafting their vision for a modern metropolis from Luxembourg Square. They can let their imagination run wild as they build intricate structures, plan urban layouts, and design unique landmarks, all within the virtual world of Minecraft. Through this engaging and interactive activity, participants are encouraged to think critically and collaboratively, as they work together to shape their ideal European capital. From iconic buildings, public spaces to sustainable infrastructure, participants can explore innovative design concepts and reimagine what a modern capital city could look like. The combination of gaming and urban planning provides a unique and stimulating experience that encourages creativity, teamwork, and problem-solving skills, all while having fun in the world of Minecraft.

As the Cultural Capital of Europe, Brussels must be able to put the management of its nightlife to the fore. The Brussels nightlife presents specific problems: cultural dynamics, social difficulties, territoriality, economic attractiveness, mobility and urban organization, environmental issues (noise, light), tourist offer, etc. The regulatory environment of a city greatly shapes the urban experience. But the evolution of life rhythms proves

Where: Les Halles – Grande Halle

Gear up for an inspiring discussion about building bridges and embracing urban transitions and transformations in Brussels. We’ll be exploring how we can work together to address the social, cultural, and urban challenges that are currently facing our city.

Our goal is to create a more sustainable, democratic, equal, and decolonized city. Luckily, Brussels is already a lab of innovative strategies, tools, and projects that promote inclusion, equality, and urban development. The question is, how can we share this knowledge with the rest of Europe?

To do this, we need to foster connections and platforms that allow for cross-sectoral collaborations and strategies. We need to find ways to bring together diverse communities and stakeholders, and build bridges across different sectors and disciplines.

And let’s not forget about Brussels’ superdiversity - this is a city with so many different cultures, languages, and backgrounds. How can we make sure that everyone is included in this process of urban transition and transformation?

Join us for this exciting discussion and help us shape the future of Brussels! Your voice matters, take this opportunity to connect with others and make a difference.

Louise Carlier (Metrolab- UCL). After studying sociology at the University of Brussels, Louise Carlier got a PhD in social and political sciences. She has worked on cosmopolitanism and more specifically on the relationship between its urban and political dimensions.

Marie Fidèle Dusingize (University Mons) is sociologue and activiste.

Brussels2030 is an opportunity to appreciate and connect the many social and cultural dynamics that shape Brussels. The pillar ‘territory’ of the Brussels candidacy explores ‘future spaces’: places where a diverse range of city makers work together locally on targeted transitions/transformations. During this cocreation session, we invite those city-makers to inspire one another. We look for linking opportunities and will develop building blocks that can support further development of existing initiatives. Together, we will build a Brussels network of future spaces.

Where: walk (departure at Beurs/Bourse) – lab: De Markten

During a walk and an atelier in the city centre, in and around the piétonnier, we will analyse and discuss a map that several students and experts created of the hypercentre. We want to reflect on the evolution and the future of commerce and cultural institutions in this zone. The privatization of space, the ‘hambergerisation’ phenomenon and cultural spaces in the city centre are among the themes that will guide us. The result will be shared/disputed cartography which will serve as a base for further discussions with politicians and local stakeholders.

Goods and passenger rail transport determined the development of the Northern Quarter from 1835 onwards. Along ‘de Kassei’ (Antwerpsesteenweg), a lively, mixed neighbourhood with houses, factories, cinemas and cafés arose. These had to make way for the progressive thinking of the Golden Sixties and the office towers of the Manhattan Plan. Is the Northern Quarter even a neighbourhood? There is no centre and the public space is inhospitable. And what exactly will replace the WTC towers, now in scaffoldings? A backbone for the whole district. This walk takes you along the old streets. A park on the old bed of the Zenne is the backbone for the whole district. This walk takes you along the contrasts of the past and future of the Northern Quarter. Because neighbourhood renewal, urban agriculture, green and blue ribbons for more biodiversity and energy districts are also emerging here.

This activity will shed light on the increasingly unaddressed climate migration topic in Europe, and how European cities should adapt to this phenomenon. The aim of the talk is to kick-start a reflection in Brussels, as the capital hub of the EU, and inspire and encourage other European urban areas to cooperate on providing the best support schemes and services to welcome the people displaced by climate-related events. First, we intend to host a diverse panel, coming from academia, NGO, personal testimony to public authority. The second part of our event would showcase the subject from an artistic perspective, bringing art as a means to unite, express, imagine an inclusive city for climate migrants.

During the Brussels 2030 Summer Assembly, SUPER TERRAM invites you to explore the complex interplays between soils, plants, railway infrastructures, and the past and future river landscape in the North of Brussels. To guide us in our journey, we count on Teresa-Gali Izard, an experienced landscape designer with international botanical expertise. Together, we will connect to the soils, the seeds, and the stories they carry, and try to reconstruct the ways in which infrastructural entanglements shape and are shaped by more-than-human life on the site.

This co-creation lab aims to stimulate, nurture, and collect young people’s images of the future for culture in Brussels through spontaneous conversations in the immediate surroundings of Les Halles. The lab is focused on the rigorous imagination of young people about culture in Brussels in 2039, 9 years after the city’s potential celebration as European Capital of Culture. During the lab, a continuous screening of a map of Brussels in Les Halles will show the urban choreographies of interviewers and interviewees and accumulate into a complex webbing of images and audio recordings of the futures talks. The lab aims to create a ‘futures palimpsest’ that will trigger individual and collective agency in the present and near future.

FRACTURE INVISIBLE is a conversation with Sophie Wittersman, historian and expert on Belgian women artists, to explore the issue of the invisibilisation of Renaissance artists. The history of women artists shows that they had to hide behind the name of their husbands or colleagues in order to create art. Today, the art world is questioning itself and trying to reassign their artworks to these invisible artists. Though this is difficult because the paintings were signed by their colleagues or spouses. They stood there, hidden, in the shadows, in a social setting that was not favourable to them. So we can speak of the INVISIBLE. In short, FRACTURE INVISIBLE is a discussion of the place of artists, women of the Renaissance who had to hide behind the names of their colleagues/husbands in order to create and question this vision in today’s world.

Where: FARI (Cantersteen 16, 1000 Bruxelles)

We will start with a Data walk, a Brussels city tour where the participants can discover data capture methods surrounding us, as well as their known usage and impact. Afterward, a visit to the FARI Test & Experience Center will be organized, where participants can discover algorithms and AI projects being developed in universities. The afternoon session will consist of a practical co-creation workshop. We start with the magical sentence ‘AND IF?’ Our question will be ‘what if public data could be used freely by everybody, what would we create out of it? What projects can citizens produce for the common good?’

In this five-day activity, participants are immersed in the world of Minecraft to dream up and design a new European capital, after a visit of European headquarters the first day. Using the popular video game as a creative tool, participants spend half-days crafting their vision for a modern metropolis from Luxembourg Square. They can let their imagination run wild as they build intricate structures, plan urban layouts, and design unique landmarks, all within the virtual world of Minecraft. Through this engaging and interactive activity, participants are encouraged to think critically and collaboratively, as they work together to shape their ideal European capital. From iconic buildings, public spaces to sustainable infrastructure, participants can explore innovative design concepts and reimagine what a modern capital city could look like. The combination of gaming and urban planning provides a unique and stimulating experience that encourages creativity, teamwork, and problem-solving skills, all while having fun in the world of Minecraft.

In August 2022, 10 youngsters from Brussels and 10 youngsters from Slovakia gathered in Bratislava to reflect on the question: “How will young Brusseleirs and Bratislavian bond in 2035?” They traveled together to futures, they created and shared creations with the others, and they got the impossible task of making movies in 60 hours. They imagined worlds on how people will connect in 2035, amidst the increasing presence of technology. They just had 2 cameras, 1 phone, some tape, some plastic, a reptile costume, a melon and a black box theater to turn ideas into films. The outcome is 3 short collaborative films (V - Revival - Middling) which explore crucial topics such as life in digital futures universes, ethical concerns of technology and different ways of interacting and connecting in a world of artificial intelligences, multiverses and infinite other possibilities.

Imagining a bold and creative future: Brussels as the capital of ideas and imagination for 500 million Europeans

 Speakers: Srecko Horvat & Chloé Mikolajszak
 Panel: Edward McMillan (The Bridge) & Georgia Brooks (The Nine)

 What: KeyNote & Discussion
 When: Friday 30.06 – 10h-13h
 Participants: max. 300
 Language: NL/FR/ENG
 Where: Les Halles – Grande Halle

Participate in the exciting discussion about the future of Brussels and its role as a capital of imagination and ideas for 500 million Europeans.

For too long, Brussels has been seen as just an administrative center of Europe, but we believe that it can be so much more. We envision a future where Brussels is not only the headquarters of key institutions but also a vibrant cultural capital that offers transformative ideas and practices to all its inhabitants.

We believe that arts and culture can play a central role in creating a shared, sustainable, and inclusive future, starting from our superdiverse and multilingual city. But we want to be even more ambitious than that. We want to explore how arts and culture can be integrated with the urban transitions we need to make, to show the way towards a different, more equal, and more inclusive Europe.

This is your chance to join the conversation and help shape the future of Brussels as a capital of imagination and ideas. Whether you’re an artist, a student, an urban planner, or just someone who cares about the future of Europe, your input is essential. Let’s imagine a better future together!

Srecko Horvat (Diem25) is a Croatian philosopher, author and translator, as well as an astute political activist. His books and essays, many of which have been translated into other languages, deal with capitalism-critical movements, emancipation and the development of Europe. Horvat writes regularly for leading media, including The Guardian, Al Jazeera, Der Spiegel and The New York Times. For a number of years he ran the Subversive Festival in Zagreb, a forum for socio-political issues in Southeast Europe. Together with Slavoj Žižek, he published the book What Does Europe Want? The Union and Its Discontents. Srećko Horvat is actively involved in the Democracy in Europe 2025 movement and was one of its founders in 2016.

Chloé Mikolajszak (Green seeds project) is an environmental and social justice activist. For the past 6 years, Chloé Mikolajszak she has been involved and coordinated several campaigns including Fashion revolution Belgium, Right to Repair and Fossil Free Politics, all attempting to create a more sustainable and equitable future.

Grief in the city, new rituals and collective care is a multi-language workshop and walk about grief in our modern city. Death is a part of life, that's our starting point. Let's take grief out of the darkness and into public spaces, together we will figure out how, what and where. In a super-diverse city, our emotions connect us, and we can support each other even if our backgrounds and languages differ. During the first half of the workshop, we will share our mourning cultures and reflect on new rituals. Afterwards, we will create new rituals in our city.

What: performance
When: Friday 30.06 – 14h-17h
Participants: max. 30
Language: NL/FR (whisper translation)
Where: GC De Kriekelaar

How can the cultural sector be even more inclusive? What barriers should we remove so that everyone can participate in Brussels' rich cultural life as an audience as well as a creator? What opportunities are there for artists who want to focus on inclusion or set up a co-creation process with vulnerable people with and without disabilities? Plazey is programming an inclusive theatre performance on the stage of GC De Kriekelaar. We will show an artistic creation by persons with disabilities. After the show moment, Lasso moderates an after-talk with the creators about their creative process. Together with the audience, we reflect on giving space to voices that are too little heard and the accessibility of art for all.

Zinneke, Park Poëtik and MetX have been working for years (whether together or not) on parades, festivals and interventions in urban public spaces. From their experience with various participatory methodologies and (international) exchanges, they find that many organisations, projects and artists are faced with similar social, socio-political and artistic challenges. Two questions summarise these well: what is the role, function and form of participatory arts in the public space in tomorrow's hyper-diverse city? Beyond all differences and drawing on our stratified identities, how do we build a common imagination, future and identity? Together with Brussels2030, they invite you to join them in reflecting on the political, social and cultural relevance of such large-scale participatory initiatives. We also look beyond national borders to see how like-minded organisations in other European cities deal with this.

A cultural capital is best discovered on foot. In 2030, Brussels must be an exemplary capital in terms of walkability. The city must be accessible, and it must be pleasant and safe to move around on foot. This is why walk.brussels is proposing an exploratory walk to analyse the walkability of a route and to find, together, the points of attention and improvements for pedestrians.

Given the particular context and impact of becoming a European Capital of Culture, we would like to offer the specific pedagogy of the Museum of Capitalism to all those within the Brussels2030 candidature. To enlarge, together, the scope of the candidating process, to be able to decide together what the city of Brussels means for us, if and how it should change, and, ultimately ask the inconvenient question: where does the money go? And who will benefit from its investments, on short- and long-term? We provide an historical perspective with contributions from past European Capital of Culture cities and facilitate the group towards a concrete proposal for the B2030 steering group.

Cultivating Brussels as a cultural laboratory for the right to the city: artistic creation and social transformation

We invite you to a thought-provoking conversation about Brussels as a laboratory for artistic creation and cultural practices that produce the right to the city.

Brussels is a diverse and dynamic city that boasts an incredible artistic scene, but unfortunately, our institutional and cultural organization doesn’t always support the production of Brussels culture. If we want to strengthen the people of Brussels and create a cultural capital that truly represents them, we need to explore how to produce cultural creations, practices, and platforms that express the city’s unique identity.

However, it’s not just about artistic expression. It’s also important to consider how cultural production can partner with social, sustainable, and decolonial transitions that our city needs to make. How can we create a creative coalition between artistic autonomy, cultural inclusion, and urban transformation?

If we succeed in building such a coalition and the institutional and policy instruments required to support it, we can become the cultural laboratory that a real capital of Europe deserves and needs to be. Join us in this conversation to explore these ideas further and imagine the possibilities for the future of our common Brussels culture.

Sjoerd Bootsma (Arcadia) is the artistic director of Dutch cultural triennial Arcadia, the follow-up of Leeuwarden-Friesland European Capital of Culture 2018. Arcadia is a large-scale cultural celebration of 100 festival days, built by many international artists, 20,000 active participants and visited by over 800,000 people. Arcadia presents makers and doers who ask how we are ‘good ancestors’ for the generations to come. In 2022 it included a wandering forest of 1200 trees through urban streets, performing and visual arts festivals, music on the mudflats and drama’s on the cliffs, and many more. From large and immersive to small and intimate. Many of the events are free. In the past Sjoerd was part of the team that created and delivered the Dutch European Capital of Culture in 2018. He was co-founder and artistic director of festivals like Explore the North and Welcome to The Village (winner of the European Festivals Association’s EFFE Award 2019).

Matthieu Goeury (Les Halles) - After studying English literature, Mathieu Goeury began by developing musical projects. After working at L’L and Bruxelles Bravo, as well as the Centre Pompidou Metz, Matthieu Goeury joined the Vorruit programming team in 2011, before becoming artistic coordinator in 2015. Since January 2023, he has been director of Les Halles de Schaerbeek.

Blurring the boundaries between two cities and two worlds through an immersive experience.

An old cart goes to the city streets, like a Raree Show (Iranian Shahre-Farang). And give rides to people while they watch 360-degree real-life narratives on a VR headset. In this project, daily life stories of various Tehran locations match another city’s atmosphere/location to create an immersive experience. For example, a part of the VR film happens at a cafe; the cart goes to a cafe to immerse the audience and blur the boundaries of the two cities/worlds.

Participants: min. 10 – max. 26
Language: FR
Where: Place Pogge – Schaarbeek (departure)

The walk to which we invite you is an opportunity to share the issues and views on the city experienced by the inhabitants of the Pogge district, at pavement level. It is also an opportunity to make several stops to explain our concrete actions: 01. the nomadic library 02. the temporary occupation of the future communal cultural centre 03. the pavement vegetation projects and the inhabitants-researchers 04. The neighbourhood party. Our cross-cutting question will be: what kind of city should be built based on the links and challenges created by its inhabitants? We will end with an aperitif-discussion in the former library of the neighbourhood, which has now become the “Casa Nova” housing complex.

Jeunes Boss is a music organization in Brussels that focuses on artistic development and empowerment of young people. In addition to music production, radio making, and event organization, the organization organizes art education workshops to train young people as "artrepreneurs" and develop their own artistic identity. The focus is not only on future rappers and musicians, but also on the organization of cultural events and culture promotion. One of the workshops is "writing and performing lyrics", where participants learn to write and perform a rap song without any required prior knowledge. The inspiration for the lyrics comes from the participants' interests themselves and enthusiasm, creativity, and team spirit are important elements during the workshop.

In this five-day activity, participants are immersed in the world of Minecraft to dream up and design a new European capital, after a visit of European headquarters the first day. Using the popular video game as a creative tool, participants spend half-days crafting their vision for a modern metropolis from Luxembourg Square. They can let their imagination run wild as they build intricate structures, plan urban layouts, and design unique landmarks, all within the virtual world of Minecraft. Through this engaging and interactive activity, participants are encouraged to think critically and collaboratively, as they work together to shape their ideal European capital. From iconic buildings, public spaces to sustainable infrastructure, participants can explore innovative design concepts and reimagine what a modern capital city could look like. The combination of gaming and urban planning provides a unique and stimulating experience that encourages creativity, teamwork, and problem-solving skills, all while having fun in the world of Minecraft.

Gentrification threatens to turn our working-class neighbourhood into a new global urban commercial space. As a result, people are being evicted from their homes. Bildy invites its audience to participate in a resistance event in the framework of the Brussels2030 Summer Assembly. Workshops, performances, food and products will be combined to address the urgent concern: ‘the right of everyone to adequate housing’. The workshops, led by Brussels artists, will offer unique artistic practices that work with holistic elements to open up new perspectives on activism. The results will be presented in a festive performance/parade created by Bildy members. With this event, Bildy wants to build a permanent participatory movement fighting for social change.

One in three residents of Brussels is non-Belgian, and they cannot vote in regional elections. Meanwhile, the city and its population have an ambivalent relationship with Brussels’s role as the de facto capital of Europe. The democratic participation platform Brussels Voice attempts to give “International Brusseaters” a voice in policy, but who does it speak to, speak with, speak for? This interactive workshop explores the contours and contradictions of the so-called international community of Brussels and asks whether being the European capital binds or divides the population.

Common Fields involves a field trip and an open collaborative creative workshop. We invite participants to explore park Botanique, a threshold between the natural and the urban, using our mobile phone to take photographs that are then reworked into prints. We generate a collective composition, where individual, subjective and collective perception intersect and where a new landscape emerges. Not only the field trip, but also the final artwork is a place of exchange, exploration, and imagination to rethink the city through commoning and commoning art through the city.

Tram 20.3.0 Talks

Keywords: Futures stories, Diversity, Living together
Hosts: BrusselAVenir

Tram 20.3.0 Talks is an audio installation consisting of 6 short audio stories of diverse Brusseleirs from the year 2030, narrated by the tram. The installation with fictional stories is an answer to BrusselAVenir’s research question “How will we share the city amongst each other in Brussels in 2030?”. The stories are about the journeys of different passengers inside a tram. Each story conveys different messages around mutual care and solidarity across differences; language and cultural plurality; connection between municipalities in Brussels; inclusive design as a norm; and a feeling of home for everyone. Each story is available in French, Dutch and English. The Tram 20.3.0 Talks is the result of a process of participatory futuring and co-creation of diverse futures visions for Brussels.

L’ Auberge Cabaret Bethleem

Keywords: Songs, Sharing, Tastes
Hosts: La Pointe asbl

The Auberge-Cabaret will be set up in the Bethlehem square in Saint-Gilles, as a place to drop off and share memories, stories and affects with the songs we live with. The Auberge-Cabaret will propose meetings-conversations that will explore the intimate, personal and collective bonds that the inhabitants weave with this universal, sensitive, light and popular form that is song. This playful and artisanal device aims to listen to the voices that make up the little music of today’s Brussels, so as not to suffocate them under the “big project”. The sessions will result in recordings broadcast on La Pointe.

Habiter la démocratie Bruxelloise grâce au cinéma participatif
Inhabiting Brussels’ democracy through participatory cinema
Brusselse democratie beleven via participatieve cinema

Keywords: Participatory film, Urban democracy, Justice, Research-creation
Hosts: Centre Vidéo de Bruxelles & Ana Povoas

A camera booth, accessible in the afternoon during the Brussels Assembly, will allow visitors to express themselves in video format on their vision of the metropolis' future, guided by two young animators. What are the main problems of 'spatial justice' that Brussels should solve? Is coexistence between inhabitants in a hyperdiverse city one of them? This permanent video project is inspired by the Ateliers Urbains, collective video workshops that allow people to live in democracy for the time of a movie... during its creation, but also during the subsequent screenings and debates. The result of these interviews will be the subject of a later editing that will feed the Brussels 2030 project.

De stad denatureren

Keywords: City’s future, More-than-human Entanglements, Architectural prophecies
Hosts: LOUiSE lab, ULB

Our current crisis is not only about the environment and the climate, but also a crisis of the imagination. By expanding how we imagine futures, we can see the present differently and change what we think or do now. For five days, fifteen students of architecture accepted the invitation to collectively dream of futures that would help us suturing the "great scission" between humans and the living earth, between culture and nature, a legacy of modernity at the root of the construction of contemporary cities. The exhibition displays the methods and the stories and drawings attempting to anticipate a more-than-human urban future.

What if we don’t see the other?

Keywords: (in)visible art and artistist, trauma, resilience
Hosts: Women in Art

Women in art puts the problem of invisibility into a whole new perspective. What if we don’t see the other? is a 3-day contemporary art exhibition in comic and canvas format with an adapted installation for the blind and visually impaired public, a guided visit using dialogue. It aims to question our vision of others and the grip these invisible relationships and fractures have on our existence. It gives a perspective on the mental impact and possible trauma involved. What if we could have seen the female artists of the Renaissance? What if the invisible became visible? What if we could spend an evening talking about the invisible fractures?

PRACTICALITIES

The Summer Assembly is organized in various locations. Les Halles and Maison des Arts serve as home base. Each morning starts with a plenary moment in La Grande Halle (Koninklijke Sint-Mariastraat 22B, 1030 Schaerbeek, see: Les Halles). After lunchtime, a variety of activities is proposed. You can buy drinks and snacks at Les Halles or bring your own food and beverage.

Participation is free, but places are limited for most activities and registration is required.

Please read through the guidelines and practical information carefully in advance of the Assembly, to prepare your participation. To ensure everything runs smoothly, we ask participants to arrive at least 15 minutes before the scheduled start time. In some locations (including the working spaces in Maison Des Arts), access for people with limited mobility is difficult without support. Do not hesitate to contact us in case of any questions or specific needs.

Aims: The Summer Assembly intends to offer a space where diverse urban actors can inspire one another and initiate processes of collaborative city-making. During these five days we will be able to discuss themes that concern us all, such as sustainability, new forms of democracy and solidarity and inclusion. Our aim is to encourage rich encounters and dialogues. We therefore welcome people with diverse personal, professional and disciplinary backgrounds. A variety of activities will be proposed, building on participatory and engaged methods. They all will inspire the Brussels2030 project.

Guiding principles: We aim to encourage dialogue and experience sharing over boundaries of disciplines, sectors, age, life experiences and backgrounds, building on critical, participatory and engaged methods. We therefore ask all participants to be open to differences and treat one another in a respectful manner.

Respecting difference: As the Summer Assembly will involve people with diverse backgrounds, try to be mindful of your phrasings and behaviors. Respect others’ cultural, linguistic, religious, professional, academic and economic backgrounds, skills, abilities and contributions.

Disagreeing with the argument, not with the person: Disagreement is allowed but remember to focus on the matter under discussion and avoid negative comments about other people.

Active participation: We encourage people to actively participate in the roundtable but be aware not to take over the entire discussion and make time and space for quieter people.

Copyright and privacy: Please note that the project team will be reporting on the content and outcomes of the Summer Assembly. Coproduced materials will be made available on the Brussels2030-website under Creative Commons license. We will therefore be collecting testimonials, and some of the sessions will be recorded or photographed. Anonymized material may be used for reporting and dissemination on social media or printed material. All participants are asked to respect the privacy of others and acknowledge copyright of any data, expertise or experiences shared during the program.

Injuries, damage or loss: The project team cannot be held responsible for loss of or damage to personal material such as tablets, cloths, cell phones, etc.

Certificates: Participants can ask for a certificate of participation.
